COMMEMORATING THE LIFE AND WORK OF ALDO LEOPOLD

• Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, today I commemorate the life and work of Aldo Leopold, who is remembered as a pivotal figure in the conservation movement of the early 20th century. Today marks the 60th anniversary of Leopold's death, and it offers us an opportunity to reflect on the lasting contributions that he made to our country.

Born in Burlington, IA, in 1887, Aldo Leopold was raised near the Mississippi River surrounded by a vibrant ecosystem that sustained abundant waterfowl and other wildlife. Early on, Leopold developed a keen interest in the natural world, devoting much of his spare time to cataloguing his observations. Graduating from Yale in 1909 with a master of forestry degree, he soon joined the nascent U.S. Forest Service with his first field assignments in the American Southwest. His career with the Forest Service brought him to my home State of New Mexico, spending time working in the Gila National Forest in the southwest part of the State before subsequently moving north to the Carson National Forest, where he reached the post of forest supervisor on the Carson.

Leopold felt that preservation had been neglected on the national forests. He foresaw the importance of preserving the biological diversity and natural systems giving way to development. He argued against the proposed expansion of a road system into the back country of the Gila National Forest. And in Albuquerque in 1922, he proposed instead that a large area be left roadless and preserved for wilderness recreation. He defined this new concept as "a continuous stretch of country preserved in its natural state, open to lawful hunting and fishing, big enough to absorb a 2 week's pack trip, and kept devoid of roads, artificial trails, cottages, or other works of man." On June 3, 1924, the Forest Service gave its final approval and designated 755,000 acres of national forest land as the Gila Wilderness. This unprecedented act took place 40 years prior to passage of the Wilderness Act and was the first such designation in the world.

Leopold once wrote that "a thing is right when it tends to preserve the integrity, stability, and beauty of the biotic community." Today the Gila Wilderness is inhabited by bear, wolf, deer, elk, beaver, bobcat, mountain lion, antelope, and wild turkey. It is a favorite destination for hikers, backpackers, hunters and anglers who enjoy its miles of fishing streams. The Gila Wilderness contains the cliff dwellings of the ancient Mogollon civilization as well as the campsites and battlegrounds of the Apache and the U.S. Cavalry. In fact, John Murray wrote in his book, "The Gila Wilderness: A Hiking Guide," that "no other wilderness area in the Southwest so much embodies and reflects this national history and natural philosophy as does the Gila."

Aldo Leopold's concept of wilderness evolved over time and heavily influenced policy makers and the growing conservation community. He wrote, "Wilderness is the raw material out of which man has hammered the artifact called civilization. . . . To the laborer in the sweat of his labor, the raw stuff on his anvil is an adversary to be conquered. So was wilderness an adversary to the pioneer. But to the laborer in repose, able for the moment to cast a philosophical eye on his world, that same raw stuff is something to be loved and cherished, because it gives definition and meaning to his life." One person who shared that definition and meaning with Aldo Leopold was former New Mexico Senator Clinton P. Anderson. In fact, due in large part to the conversations he had with Leopold 40 years earlier, Senator Anderson led the effort in Congress to pass the Wilderness Act of 1964.

On April 21, 1948, at the age of 61, Aldo Leopold died of a heart attack while helping his neighbors fight a brush fire near his farm. Just 1 week earlier, Leopold had received word that his book of essays had finally found a publisher. Published over a year after his death, "A Sand County Almanac" remains one of Aldo Leopold's greatest legacies to the conservation movement.

Leopold laments in "A Sand County Almanac" that progress in conservation is slow—a fact that hasn't changed much in modern times. "Despite nearly a century of propaganda," he wrote, "conservation still proceeds at a snail's pace; progress still consists largely of letterhead pieties and convention oratory. On the back forty we still slip two steps backward for each forward stride." On this anniversary of Aldo Leopold's death, I am pleased that the Senate is once again making progress on protecting wilderness, through bills such as the Wild Sky Wilderness Act that passed last week, and upcoming bills that are making their way through the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources. These bills are effective steps to preserve our heritage for future generations, consistent with the values for which Leopold advocated so eloquently during his life, and I am pleased that so many Senators, on both sides of the aisle, have supported them.●

TRIBUTE TO GLENNA GOODACRE

• Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, I wish to pay tribute to Glenna Goodacre, who was recently named the Notable New Mexican of 2008 by the Albuquerque Museum Foundation. Glenna is a nationally acclaimed sculptor whose works include designing the Sacagawea dollar coin and sculpting the Vietnam Women's Memorial here in Washington, DC.

A resident of New Mexico since 1983, Glenna was born in Lubbock, TX. She graduated from Colorado College in Colorado Springs, CO. While obtaining her undergraduate degree, Glenna first showed her strong ability to persevere in spite of defeatist-minded individuals. She pursued her dream to become a sculptor despite the discouragement she faced from her professor. At her graduation, she gave a commencement address titled, "Success Is the Greatest Revenge," a speech which reflected back on to the opposition she once faced.

Throughout her career, Glenna has created many awe-inspiring bronze sculptures. Her most ambitious piece, the Irish Memorial installed at Penn's Landing in Philadelphia, contains 35 life-size figures. She is also credited with the creation of two 8-foot standing figures of Ronald Reagan. One stands in the Reagan Library in California and the other at the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum in Oklahoma City.

Glenna's countless accomplishments have won her the recognition of the New Mexico Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts and the Texas Medal of Arts. In addition to these honors, she has also been inducted into the Cowgirl Hall of Fame in Fort Worth. Although a fall in early 2007 threatened to end her dreams, Glenna bounced back to make excellent progress in her rehabilitation and recovery. Her experience even inspired her to dedicate her piece titled "Crossing the Prairie" to St. Vincent Regional Medical Center, a facility which was credited with saving her life.

The Notable New Mexican program celebrates the extraordinary accomplishments of people like Glenna. Every year since 2001, the Albuquerque Museum Foundation honors a Notable for his or her high achievements, strong ties to New Mexico, and contributions to the public good. This year, Glenna will join the ranks of former Notables such as artists Wilson Hurley and Georgia O'Keeffe, authors Tony Hillerman and Rudolfo Anaya, and former Governor Bruce King.

It is with great honor that I speak before you today, Mr. President, to commemorate the countless accomplishments of Glenna Goodacre. Again, I congratulate her on being named the Notable New Mexican of 2008.●

RETIREMENT OF JOHN DRUMMOND

● Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, today I ask the Senate to join me in recognizing State Senator John W. Drummond on the occasion of his retirement from the South Carolina State Senate. As a decorated military hero, a successful businessman, and a respected public figure, Senator Drummond has left an indelible mark on the Palmetto State. He is a true public servant, guided not by desire for recognition but by the desire to achieve great good for the state he serves.

Born in Greenwood, SC, John Drummond was the fourth of Jim and Fannie Drummond's seven children. His father worked for the Greenwood Cotton Mill for many years before moving his family to a new mill village in Ninety Six, where he excelled in academics and athletics. Eager to expand his horizons, he seized the opportunity to serve in the military by joining the 263rd South Carolina Coast Artillery Regiment based in Charleston.

Senator Drummond distinguished himself in his training and landed a post as a bomber-fighter pilot in the 405th Fighter Group. The group reported for duty in the European theater of the war in March 1944. In his initial months of service, Drummond provided air interdiction and close air support, including involvement in a successful attack on a SS mess hall identified by information from the French Resistance.

After attaining the rank of captain, Drummond led his squadron while providing air coverage for the Allied armada from German artillery positions on D-day and for ground troops in the months that followed.

On July 29, 1944, Drummond's plane was downed by anti-aircraft fire. He was badly injured after parachuting out at a low level and was captured by Germans and imprisoned for 10 months in a POW camp in Barth, Germany.

Finally freed by the Russian army after V-E Day, Drummond's valor earned him the Distinguished Flying Cross, two Purple Hearts, nine Air Medals, three Battle Stars, and a Presidential Citation.

Following a jubilant homecoming, Drummond gradually transitioned to civilian life, marrying a hometown girl, Holly Self, and starting his young family which eventually included three sons.

After inheriting the Greenwood Petroleum Company, his aptitude for business led him to the establishment of the Drummond Oil Company. Senator Drummond still serves as president of both of these successful enterprises.

Senator Drummond and his wife, fondly known as "Ms. Holly," have long played a leading role in the civic affairs of Greenwood County and the town of Ninety Six. Both were devoted church members, and Ms. Holly is remembered for her dedication to the missions of the Ninety-Six Baptist Church as well as for her role as an enthusiastic advocate of town preservation.

Interested in the economic prosperity of Greenwood, Senator Drummond devoted his considerable talents as a respected business leader to the issues of business development and rural electrification affecting its citizens.

After serving 2 years in the South Carolina House of Representatives, Senator Drummond campaigned and won a seat in the State Senate, a position he has held for over forty years.

The longest serving State Senator in South Carolina history, his time in the legislature will be remembered for his ability to forge relationships across racial, gender, and political lines, and his sincere desire to provide excellent representation and service for the people of Greenwood County.

He has been widely described as a statesman, a position that is reflected by his current position as the senate's President Pro Tempore Emeritus.

As further proof of his remarkable leadership, he has been honored by the establishment of the Drummond Center, an institute at Erskine College dedicated to promoting civil discourse across party lines for the benefit of all South Carolinians.

Throughout his career, he has been the recipient of countless legislative achievement and appreciation awards from a wide range of groups and individuals, including the Order of the Palmetto, the highest civilian honor awarded by the Governor.

John Drummond has served his State and Nation. His legacy is one of unparalleled commitment to his fellow citizens, and his influence will be felt for many years to come.

I thank him sincerely for his service and leadership and wish him the very best in his retirement. I ask that the Senate join me in honoring my friend, Senator John W. Drummond.●

RECOGNIZING SHANNON RENAE VAUX

● Mr. THUNE. Madam President, today I recognize Shannon Renae Vaux, an intern in my Aberdeen, SD office, for all of the hard work she has done for me, my staff, and the State of South Dakota over the past several months.

Shannon is a graduate of Central High School in Aberdeen, SD. Currently she is attending Northern State University, where she is majoring in biology. She is a hard worker who has been dedicated to getting the most out of her internship experience.

I would like to extend my sincere thanks and appreciation to Shannon for all of the fine work she has done and wish her continued success in the years to come.●

RECOGNIZING CATHERINE ALM

● Mr. THUNE. Madam President, today I recognize Catherine Alm, an intern in my Sioux Falls, SD office, for all of the hard work she has done for me, my staff, and the State of South Dakota over the past several months.

Catherine is a graduate of Eastview High School in Apple Valley, MN. Currently she is attending Augustana College, where she is majoring in government and Spanish. She is a hard worker who has been dedicated to getting the most out of her internship experience.

I would like to extend my sincere thanks and appreciation to Catherine for all of the fine work she has done and wish her continued success in the years to come.●

THANKING LOUISIANA VOLUNTEERS

● Mr. VITTER. Madam President, today I wish to acknowledge the volunteers of St. Francis Medical Center and St. Francis North Hospital in Monroe, LA. On Monday, April 28, they will hold their annual Volunteer Spring Banquet to honor its 120 active volunteers and recognize their hard work and dedication to helping others. I would like to spend a few moments highlighting their achievements.

The St. Francis Medical Center and St. Francis North Hospital volunteers combined for a total of 19,207.5 volunteer service hours for 2007. Several of these volunteers will be receiving individual awards highlighting their accomplishments and all that they do to improve their communities. I would like to recognize 11 women in particular who will receive the President's Call to Service Award for 4,000 hours or more of volunteer service in one's lifetime. These women are: Joy Beaver, Ruth Beavers, Bettye Bennett, Angie Bruscato, Lucille Calk, Ann Clayton, Ruby Coats, Eva Fowler, Talma Turrentine, Anita Tempalski, and Patsy Welch. These ladies have volunteered a total of 80,695 hours of service.

In addition, three St. Francis volunteers will receive the Daily Point of Light Award which is administered through the Points of Light Foundation on behalf of the White House. This award is designed to honor those who have made a commitment to connect Americans through service to help meet critical needs in their communities. This prestigious award is given each weekday in honor of recipients who exemplify the best in volunteerism. St. Francis is the only organization within the State of Louisiana to have three individuals honored with this award. They are: Angie Bruscato, Talma Turrentine, and Lucille Calk. These Daily Point of Light winners have been placed in the Presidential Greeter program for a possible visit from President George W. Bush in the near future.

I applaud all of the volunteers of St. Francis Medical Center and St. Francis
